PTCA BALLOON USED IN ANJIOPLASTY PROCEDURE

(Percutaneous Transluminal Coronary Angioplasty)

Angioplasty is a procedure to expand narrow arteries that may follow on from an angiogram. It is a non-surgical treatment used to open narrowed coronary arteries to improve blood flow to the heart. The procedure starts out the same way as a Catheterization.
The balloon is then inflated, and it compresses the athermanous plaque and stretches the artery wall to expand.
